

Appendix: every coded post, and the 59 journalists with their coverage

Second edition. Appendix to “59 BBC journalists, 18,000 posts”, nuze.com, 27 September 2026. Quotations are verbatim from the person's public X or Bluesky account on the date shown, as collected on 25–27 September 2026. Employer at the time of the post is noted where it was not the BBC.

What changed in the second edition. The first edition coded from keyword filters plus a full read of every flagged post. Later on 27 September every one of the 16,988 posts and replies authored by the 57 account holders was read in full, without filters. That read found own-voice posts the filters had missed for three people coded None (Luke Mintz, Harry Sekulich, Esme Stallard), found further left-coded posts for two people coded Lean right (Lindsey Alder, Dan Sales) that move them to Mixed under the rubric, and raised Hayley Clarke from Lean to Clear. It also added quotations for Rawnsley, Edwards, Espiner and Dempsey without changing their codes. The count moved from 13 showing a stance (9 left, 2 right, 2 mixed) to 16 (12 left, 0 right, 4 mixed). Every post that changed a code is quoted below.

Part A. The 16 who show a stance

Jessica Rawnsley (@JrRawnsley) — reporter, home news. Clear left (green-left). All coded posts predate her BBC byline; at the time she was freelancing for the Guardian, the Economist, the FT and Huck.

“So much of the focus on XR and environmental activists centres on personal ‘hypocrisies’. Every message & messenger immediately disqualified. It's a distraction. To make real change, we need millions of these ‘hypocrites’” 15 Oct 2019

“this #HowDareYou” 25 Sep 2019, sharing Greta Thunberg's UN speech

“found one boris #crusty #ExtinctionRebellion” 9 Oct 2019

“first the pink beanbags, now the pink octopus. glad to see the police are on top of dangerous threats to London right now.” 9 Oct 2019

“And this is the party that “understands the will of the people”? We deserve better. #Grenfell” 6 Nov 2019, on Jacob Rees-Mogg's Grenfell remarks

“This is a bizarre election tactic. Simply drawing attention to more unfulfilled promises from the Tories? #Conservatives #Election2019” 11 Nov 2019

“Another report that the Tory govt. refuses to release - this time a secret fracking report” 3 Dec 2019

“Fascinating @intelligence2 debate last week with some brilliant speakers & thoroughly persuasive arguments. Whether capitalism should end or be regulated, however, the question remains - who will do it and when?” 4 Feb 2020

“This time last year @ExtinctionR took over London to demand action on the ecological crisis. While we battle this pandemic, we must not forget the other fight that's still ongoing. @XRLondon #ClimateEmergency #ExtinctionRebellion” 17 Apr 2020

“How come we have taken back control, but may soon no longer be able to send sausages from Birmingham to Belfast?” 24 Jun 2021

“I wrote about the current strikes at Goldsmiths, the powerful solidarity between students + staff & the wider transformation of British universities into profit-making machines w/ staff on insecure, casualised contracts & students consumers not learners” 3 Dec 2021

“Great to chat to @ProfTimBale & @ProfNJAllen about why the term supermajority is ‘utterly meaningless’ in a British context & simply a scaremongering Tory tactic to bring wavering voters back to the party.” 14 Jun 2024, for the i paper

Oscar Edwards (@_oscaredwards97) — reporter. Clear left. Posts predate the BBC (student and local journalism).

“Corbyn bringing out the facts. Questioning Universal Credit due to rent arrears causing evictions in the UK #PMQs” 15 Nov 2017

“A big thank you to the Adelaide and Central Hove Labour ward for listening to and supporting our cause at tonight's meeting. With total solidarity we will achieve our goals! #SpoonsStrike” 6 Sep 2018

“We really are an entitled little Island aren't we? Of course, it wouldn't be the front page of the Express without stoking up some racial tension towards the runaway royal. #rightwingmedia” 22 Aug 2020

“Four months. Four protests. What an experience it has been to be part of the #BLM movement this summer. As always, #Brighton turned out in force for something it believes in - despite the global pandemic. This movement is not over. On to 2021.” 19 Sep 2020

Dominic Casciani (@BBCDomC; bbcdomc.bsky.social) — home and legal correspondent. Liberal-institutional (rule of law, courts, human rights framework). BBC-era posts.

“Funnily enough... correct me if I am wrong, but isn't mandatory seatbelt-wearing one of the laws that could be automatically repealed at year's end under the post-Brexit Retained EU Law bill? What's the plan to replace that law?” 19 Jan 2023

“Meanwhile over in the other hate-filled place my colleague from the Evening Standard is reporting...” 11 Dec 2023, Bluesky, referring to X

“I'm no longer posting on what was once Twitter, firming up a choice I made a year ago. I'll be on Blue Sky under the same name.” 13 Nov 2024

“Lucy Connolly pleaded guilty. She admitted she was a criminal. What is the alternative to a randomly chosen jury, if someone accused of a crime says they have a defence that they are entitled to be put in a fair trial? Does Mr Philp support the ancient right to trial by jury?” 15 Aug 2025, reply to a post by Chris Philp

“I'm not saying it's impossible - but UK terror laws need to be publicly justified in independent courts to be used. Digging up a golf green is not terrorism. It's minor vandalism in crim law terms (or direct action if you take the view that...)” 14 Aug 2025, Bluesky

Issues coded: Brexit M (procedural), policing/crime and civil liberties L, culture war (X) L. No R. Most of his output is legal explanation; the coding rests on the choice of targets and the framing.

Luke Mintz (@lukemintz) — reporter, home news. Clear left/liberal. All coded posts were made while a features writer at the Telegraph, before the BBC. Added in the second edition: the first-edition filters did not flag these.

“Caught up on #DragRaceUK and seeing Davina de Campo talk about Section 28 was really quite moving. Made me so glad I went to school after that monstrous policy was abolished” 4 Nov 2019

“The only thing I find more infuriating than anti-Semitism in Labour is Tory ministers pretending to care about anti-Semitism in Labour then being totally cool with racism in their own party” 6 Dec 2019

“Imagine, just IMAGINE, if the top universities started discriminating against students based on their class, and one social group began to dominate places. Totally unprecedented if you ask me” 29 Jan 2020, sharing a report on private-school pupils at Oxbridge

“I’m aware that the cool people on Twitter have decided we all need to hate Mayor Pete, but I’ll admit that I still well up slightly when I see a viable contender for U.S. president proudly kissing his husband” 6 Feb 2020

“Great piece. Young people have overwhelmingly cooperated with lockdown measures that are primarily designed to protect older people. As we should. And once this is all over, asset-rich pensioners should do their bit in return” 17 Apr 2020

“This is a great summary of why everyone I know who works in London finds it mystifying that Tories / business leaders are desperate to cling to the Pret economy @sarahoconnor_” 1 Sep 2020

“And what if the people doing the cancelling are wrong?” 9 Jul 2020, replying to an image that could not be recovered; not coded

Issues coded: culture/LGBT L, race L, tax/welfare L, class and education L. The cancel-culture reply is quoted for completeness but its target is not recoverable, so it is not coded. BBC-era posts: none coded.

Hayley Clarke (@iamHayleyClarke) — reporter. Clear left. Posts made while a radio producer at an independent production company and then on BBC Radio 2 output, before BBC News. Raised from Lean in the second edition after the full read found posts on three further issues.

“Stop blaming the opposition and do something about it” 21 Oct 2020

“Real classy endorsement right there” 3 Nov 2020, sharing a report of a celebrity endorsement of Donald Trump

“Ahhh what a beautiful morning on Twitter. Filled with racism, anti-BBC & anti-traveller rhetoric. So festive!” 6 Dec 2020

“Love being told what to do by someone who is clearly going to be stuffing his face full of turkey in his giant house this Christmas. Joy.” 19 Dec 2020, on Boris Johnson's Christmas Covid rules

“What kind of person do you have to be to boo people taking a knee? We’re a multi-cultural country and life is politics. Wake up!” 13 Jun 2021

“Let the virtue signalling COMMENCE” 5 Jul 2021, context not recoverable; not coded

“Quick, get back in the Tardis and spin us back to pre Brexit” 24 Oct 2022

Issues coded: Brexit L, race and policing L (repeated), US right L, party comment L (anti-Johnson). BBC News-era posts: none coded.

Adam Goldsmith (@AdamGoldsmith_) — political reporter. Lean left. Student posts before joining the BBC in November 2022.

“I also appreciate that using this space for positive change is an absolute must right now. So, if you needed any encouragement to understand that racism isn't just something that happens in America, please listen to this album by Dave. It's a necessity.” 1 Jun 2020

Issues coded: race L (one post). BBC-era posts: none coded. The full read confirmed nothing further.

“BBC job cut details due this morning. I think the licence fee freeze is an absolute travesty, and that the gov... (cont)” 6 Oct 2011, truncated by the platform

“Rotten boroughs indeed RT @loftspace: 1in 4 Tory peers have a direct financial interest in NHS reforms.” 19 Mar 2012

Issues coded: tax/spend L (two posts, both more than eight years old, so weighted as lean). BBC-era posts (2018–2023): none coded.

Harry Sekulich (@HarrySekulich) — reporter, home news. Lean left. Post made while at ABC News in Australia, before the BBC. Added in the second edition.

“The rise of anti-LGBTQ extremism should disturb everyone. We all lose when drag queens are forced into silence by farcical rage. Great read ex @guardian @cait___kelly” 21 May 2023

Issues coded: trans/LGBT and culture war L (one post). BBC-era posts: none coded. His account holds 32 posts in total.

Katy Watson (@katiwatson) — correspondent, Australia (formerly South America). Lean left. BBC-era posts.

“Lula starts the process of taking back the flag and making it a symbol of national pride again, not a symbol of Brazil's far-right.” 31 Oct 2022

“Lula's new environment minister will be @MarinaSilva - it's a big signal that he is serious about fixing the destruction. She's one of Brazil's biggest environmental activists.” 29 Dec 2022

“For a country that prides itself on welcoming migrants there's a big exception in Australia - those who are disabled or who have chronic health conditions - but campaigners hope for change” 8 Jul 2024

“I actually feel grateful #downsyndrome came into my life... feel privileged I understand now how awful society is to people who don't conform” 21 Mar 2024

Issues coded: party/Latin American left L (one post; the Marina Silva line is analysis with an approving frame), immigration L (disability rules; she has disclosed that her own family was “at the wrong end of Australia's rigorous immigration process”, 14 Jan 2024), disability advocacy sustained but not on the rubric's issue list. The full read found nothing further of substance.

“A welcome counter to Trump's daily critiques of NATO: @edwardlucas sets out the cards Europe does have...” 2 Apr 2026

Shared without comment: “Trump's Attack on Venezuela Is Illegal and Unwise” (New York Times opinion headline) 4 Jan 2026, Bluesky

Egon Cossou (@egoncossou1) — business. Lean left, aged. BBC-era posts (2015–17).

“Funny, savage take on Trump's run for office We the Stupid from Slate's The Gist” 28 Aug 2015

Shared: “Watch: SNL and Alec Baldwin wreck and drag Donald Trump for his sexual assault brags - Vox” 9 Oct 2016

“Lol yes both unfunny, pernicious pests” 7 Jun 2017, in a thread naming Katie Hopkins

Issues coded: US right L (repeated, all more than eight years old, so weighted as lean); culture war L (one post). Also, against the grain: criticised the New York Times as “shameful” for publishing Manchester bombing evidence (25 May 2017) and defended the BBC against a “Ban the BBC” account (Feb 2017).

Esme Stallard (@EsmeStallard) — climate and science reporter. Lean left (climate). BBC-era posts. Added in the second edition; a judgement call, explained below.

“Nice to be able to bring two positive (for most people) science stories in two days. HSBC has announced it will end financing for new oil and gas fields. Will other banks follow suit? What could this mean for North Sea oil and gas licensing?” 14 Dec 2022

“£2 bus fares offered by 130 operators! Brilliant news! Buses: - Reduce congestion - Reduce emissions - And are the most-used public transport mode for people on lower incomes” 19 Dec 2022, on a Conservative government scheme

“@BBCNewsnight great post ankle op watching. @vicderbyshire asking Science Secretary Michelle Donelan about mistruths from #ConservativeConference. I worked for years in urban planning - 15 min cities are about improving transport links not how many times you c...” 3 Oct 2023

“This is important for removing some of the potential risks for governments in setting net zero policies” 22 Feb 2024, on the UK leaving the Energy Charter Treaty

Issues coded: climate and net zero L. The first edition treated these as enthusiasm for her beat and coded None. On a full read, calling a bank's exit from oil and gas finance “positive (for most people)” and a treaty exit “important” for net zero are own-voice approvals on a rubric issue, so the rubric's lean rule applies. A stricter reader would say the repetition makes it clear; a looser one would keep None because a climate reporter welcoming climate policy is not a party position. We have coded Lean.

Harry Farley (@HarryFarley_) — political correspondent. Mixed. Pre-BBC op-ed plus BBC-era faith reporting.

“As someone who used to work for a Tory MP I feel thoroughly disillusioned with how the poor are dismissed as feckless beggars. It is profoundly judgemental and un-Christian.” The Independent, 25 Dec 2015, “David Cameron's Britain is profoundly unchristian”

“This is brilliant news! Mina Smallman's programme was a gripping listen - a powerful human story that explored some of the biggest issues of the year; police failures, violence against women, and racism.” 31 Mar 2022

Issues coded: tax/spend/welfare L (2015), immigration M (reports Welby's criticism of Rwanda and the Archbishop of Rwanda's rebuttal), culture/faith M. Former Conservative staffer by his own account. Coded mixed.

Lindsey Alder (@linds_alder) — reporter. Mixed. Posts made while a news editor at LBC and Heart, before the BBC. The first edition coded Lean right on the mini-budget post; the full read found the posts below, which the filters had not flagged, and the rubric's mixed rule applies.

“Two years on. The British economy would be in much better shape if the Mini Budget had been implemented.” 23 Sep 2024

“Sarah Huckabee Sanders after her gubernatorial primary win: “We will make sure that when a kid is in the womb, they're as safe as they are in a classroom.” Um.” 26 Jun 2022

““White life” Terrifying.” 26 Jun 2022, on a Republican congresswoman's remark at a Trump rally

“Thoughts and prayers with Nadine Dorries right now.” 5 Jul 2022, the evening Sunak and Javid resigned from Boris Johnson's cabinet

“That's an EIGHTY PERCENT RISE. I'm on a decent wage, I don't live hand to mouth and I'm panicking about how to afford my heating. I cannot even imagine how others in less fortunate positions are feeling. Everyone involved should be deeply ashamed.” 26 Aug 2022, on the energy price cap announcement

“I've lived here nearly 4 years and never seen Edgbaston Reservoir this low. It's mid October and apart from a few brief (torrential) downpours, it's not rained this month. Climate change on my doorstep.” 13 Oct 2022

“LETTUCE REJOICE” 20 Oct 2022, the day Liz Truss resigned

“Watched the #USAGP on delay - after David Tennant retuning as the Doctor and #ByeBoris, I genuinely thought I was on for a Lewis win....” 23 Oct 2022

“Yet more proof that this country cannot be trusted to vote for anything #ImACeleb” 26 Nov 2022, joke

Dan Sales (@ByDanSales) — reporter. Mixed. All coded material predates the BBC, at MailOnline. The first edition coded him right by published output; the full read of his own-voice posts found L and R both present, and the rubric's mixed rule takes precedence.

Output under his byline at MailOnline (2021–2025) is dominated by gender-critical, asylum and “woke” framings, admitted under rubric section 3 as published articles under his own name, for example:

“EXCLUSIVE: Now health professionals are urged to call vaginas 'bonus holes' to avoid offending trans or non-binary patients” 8 Jul 2023

“EXCLUSIVE: Anger as woke firm refuses to print stickers defining women as 'adult human females' in trans rights row.” 3 Feb 2023

“Killjoy MPs are now attempting to tell families where and when they can put up their own Christmas lights in the latest sad chapter in nanny state meddling.” 11 Nov 2021

His own-voice posts on the same issue point the same way:

“What on earth is going on in Scotland? How can anyone think something like this is okay?” 27 Jan 2023, on the housing of a transgender rapist in a women's prison

His own-voice political comments cut the other way:

“Fuel duty cut will barely make a dent on cost of living crisis. 5p off a litre equates to less than £3 off a tank of petrol - extremely poor. Slashing VAT on energy-saving materials not very useful either if you can't afford them in the first place. Absolutely...” 23 Mar 2022

“AKA elderly Tory voters what a mad coincidence” 23 Mar 2022, on who gained from the spring statement

“If this press conference was supposed to show how contrite and humbled Boris Johnson is after the Sue Gray report, it hasn't worked - it is an absolute car crash” 25 May 2022

“Difficult to imagine how journalists might ever be able to trust any denials from PM spokesman or No 10 press office on anything ever again really - shameful” 26 May 2022

“I reckon they might have wanted to have a few more people read this statement before they put it out. What a strop, petulant and ill-gracious capitulation” 3 Oct 2022, on the 45p tax rate U-turn

“Is Liz Truss really pinning Tory hopes of holding off Labour at the next general election on this pretend Anti Growth Coalition she's made up?! Like a child pretending people that don't agree with them are all in some kind of cabal of supervillains. It's pathetic.” 5 Oct 2022

“Genuine question: If you can afford to put £40,000 into a pension EVERY YEAR, are you really in a group of people that most needs the Government to help you save even more of your money?” 15 Mar 2023

Issues coded: trans/sex-based rights R (own voice and repeated output), culture war R (output), tax/spend L (repeated), party comment L (Johnson, Truss). L and R both present, so Mixed.

Michael Dempsey (@Dempseychat) — freelance business contributor. Mixed, with the weight on the right. Additional quotations added in the second edition.

“I’m a remainer but keep trying (& it’s not easy) to point out to my fellow remainers that the open contempt shown towards leave voters is inexcusable & has only pushed people further into entrenched positions.” 29 Nov 2019

“So true. They have zero grasp of how crime often blights the lives of those who cannot afford to live in upmarket postcodes.” 30 Jul 2019

“I find the whole Greta circus very disturbing. It is time someone with the interests of this very young woman at heart stepped in & had a sincere word. Clearly the people around her have their own agendas.” 14 Aug 2019

“Maybe ‘Winchester College Uber Alles’ might be a more appropriate slogan for Corbyn’s heroic battle against, er, privilege?” 16 Sep 2019

“At least there’s one country where our constitutional monarchy gets the respect it’s due!” 25 Sep 2019

“C’mon over to Chiswick where the locals are in open revolt against constant gridlock & dying shops triggered by a spectacularly stupid LTN. #chiswickchaos” 17 Nov 2020

“Horrible, isn’t it? Complete absence of any true human empathy in the revolutionary left.” 15 Feb 2021

“The elephant in the room here is the destruction of grammar schools. Mine went comprehensive & the difference in motivation/staff attitudes/standards was shocking.” 20 Jul 2021

Issues coded: Brexit L (Remainer, with a rebuke to Remainers), climate R (Thunberg), race/policing R (crime), monarchy R, culture war R, party comment R (anti-Corbyn, anti-left). Under the rubric, L and R both present, so Mixed; on weight of posts he is the most right-leaning person in the sample.

Part B. Notable posts by people coded None

These are quoted because they bear on the question, not because they show a stance.

Iain Watson: “Nonsense. I said nothing about ‘foreign courts’ I used a clip of the PM using that phrase followed by Keir Starmer pledging not to break international conventions. Reporting accurately what the PM said (with an opposing view) cannot be seen as endorsement by any reasonable person” 5 Jun 2024; “It’s neither lazy nor lying. don’t invent an agenda on my behalf. I gave Labour’s reason for his suspension That’s not to endorse it.” 31 Oct 2023

Matt Chorley: “We’re going to have to respectfully disagree on this. Some people like Tory voices, some don’t. We have a responsibility to provide a range of voices, and the experience of people who have been in government can be useful as part of the mix.” 23 Jan 2025, Bluesky; “If you don’t think 1/4 Labour MPs calling for the PM to go, trade unions demanding a timetable, a potential challenger meeting the PM face to face, and the King’s Speech being overshadowed is not news, or worth ‘giving a toss about’ I can’t help you” 13 May 2026; “You’re accusing others of bias without checking your own. Today new files were released. That’s news. A month ago details of Farage’s gift were released. That was news.” 1 Jun 2026; “I owe Nigel Farage an apology. During last night’s Newsnight we covered the murder of Henry Nowak and the political reaction to the case, including discussing Nigel Farage’s comments about ‘pure, cold rage’. However I referred to ‘white cold rage’. This was a mistake on my...” 3 Jun 2026; “I honestly think that they/them slogan was genius, and if it was for any other candidate the very-online would be going on about how clever it was” 18 Nov 2024, Bluesky, on a Trump campaign advert; “I’m just someone from a working class background who didn’t go to university not being put on a pedestal” 11 May 2026

Ione Wells: “I did interviews in Spanish and Portuguese and tried to always humanise the people at the heart of big global stories: impartially and non-judgementally.” 28 Jul 2026

Pallab Ghosh: “I don't do partisan politics because of the Beeb's impartiality rules” 28 Nov 2024, Bluesky

Joe Pike: “Important must-read investigation from @billykenber and @phill_kemp. Legal advisers help migrants pose as gay to get asylum, undercover BBC investigation finds” 15 Apr 2026; “EXCL: A Jewish former classmate of Nigel Farage has told the BBC the Reform UK leader is being ‘fundamentally dishonest’...” 25 Nov 2025; “ICYMI: Len McCluskey, Unite's Birmingham hotel and the private jets. My report...” 23 Jul 2025

Glenn Campbell: “Some on here pointing out that the cause the protestors represent - saving the planet - is bigger than anything being discussed at #FMQs I just don't see how their tactics advance their agenda” 30 Mar 2023

Dearbail Jordan: “@PrivateEyeNews crying with laughter at ‘Trump's Tariffs: Your questions answered’. Especially the chlorine equation. Brilliant” 21 Apr 2025; “reading Four Chancellors and a Funeral - laughing a lot but also want to scream. Might just combine the two.” 9 Jul 2025, Bluesky, on a satirical account of the 2022 Conservative governments; “Kay Graham and Ben Bradlee are spinning in their graves.” 26 Feb 2025, Bluesky, on the Washington Post's opinion pages. Enjoying satire of the government of the day is not on the rubric's issue list; quoted so readers can judge.

Mitchell Labiak: “She seems genuinely cheesed off about the decision, and she has a point. The government is failing to build enough social housing, reform the planning system, address the leasehold scandal, or do justice to the victims of Grenfell.” 13 Nov 2023, at Investors' Chronicle, on the sacking of a housing minister. Housing-beat criticism of a government record; not coded.

Mary McCool: “Elon Musk weighing in on this issue in such a casual manner while simultaneously blanking interview requests is frankly mind-blowing” 6 Aug 2024

Beth Rose: “@RMTunion well done on ruining a treat. Your strike ended at 9...london still in lock down. Invoice for taxi, hotel and train tkts posted” 30 Apr 2014

Lyndsey Telford: shared the Sunday Times story “The ultra-rich Tory donors with access to Boris Johnson's top team” without comment 19 Feb 2022
